Chilean Government Celebrates Coup Anniversary Quietly

The military government's commemoration of Chile's first anniversary of the overthrow of President Allende went off without incident yesterday. Leftist groups apparently made no attempt to disrupt the celebrations.

President Pinochet announced an end to the year-old state of internal war, an action that has important juridical implications, but he made it clear that there will be little relaxation of the country's stringent security measures. He said that the government is "disposed" to release prisoners en masse, and called upon Cuba and the USSR to do likewise.
